INDICTED 48 POLICEMEN IN CINCINNATI

CONSPIRACY TO VIOLATE LAW CHARGED AGAINST OFFICERS

List Includes Detectives, Sergeants and Patrolmen—Four Counts for Liquor Law Violators, Possession, Transportation, Sale and Maintaining a Nuisance—Mayor Carrel Wants Thoro Housecleaning.

The special grand jury which had been investigating charges of bribery of police officers and village enforcement officers in Hamilton county has blown off the lid by the indictment of between 50 to 100 pesons—48 of whom are policemen.

The entire investigation is an outgrowth of the indictment and sentencing last January of Byron M. Roberts. He was former narcotic inspector in Cincinnati and Cleveland.

Once under arrest Roberts proceeded to "drag half the town in after him," as he expressed it.

Roberts went before the grand jury after being brought back to Cincinnati from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Six dry agents are already under arrest on charges of accepting bribes.

The list of names of the members of the police department indicted was placed in the hands of Chief of Police William Copelan by United States Marshal Stanley Borthwick.

The list included all detectives of the night chief's force except Lieutenant Eugene Weatherly; all members of the "flying squad" except Lieutenant John Seebohm; one lieutenant, Audrey Houston, of the fourth district; two sergeants, John Heidenreith and John Joachim, and three members of the gambling squad of the day detective force.

All of the indictments returned by the grand jury were brought under the conspiracy law of the federal statutes.

District Attorney Mau issued a statement that the jurors would be recalled to probe further the conditions in Cincinnati.

The indictments contain four counts—conspiracy to possess liquor, conspiracy to transport, conspiracy to sell and conspiracy to maintain a nuisance.

It is said that almost 100 law enforcement officers and others were named in the indictments.

Mayor Carrel said: "I welcome the federal investigation. It will have a cleaning and clearing effect. I do not want one guilty man on the force and I hope all who are guilty will be convicted.

Beasts of Prey Attack Mountain School Folk

Wenatchee, Wash.—The danger of attacks by wild animals on students attending the schools in the mountain districts near here has become so great that many of the pupils, even the younger children, are carrying rifles to shoot them with. This practice resulted largely from the recent attack by a cougar on Jimmy Fehlhaber, who was killed by the animal.

Verne Smith, thirteen, was returning to his home from school when a lynx attacked him. He shot and wounded the animal with a small rifle. This enraged it and it was only by fighting fiercely and with the aid of his dog that the lad managed to escape death. A farmer killed the animal.

Arthur Parsib, sixteen, another student of the same school, killed a rabid coyote.

Wild animals have been driven to lower altitudes this year because the severe winter has wiped out their ordinary sources of food supply.

NONAGENARIAN

Edward Davidson Died at Williamsport—Funeral Sunday Afternoon.

Edward Davidson, one of the oldest residents of Pickaway county, died at Williamsport Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock of infirmities due to old age.

He was a son of William and Rachel Ater Davidson and was born in this county June 15, 1833. He married Harriet Howard July 31, 1862, and she died September 14, 1879. He was the last of a family of ten children.

He is survived by three sons and two daughters. They are George Davidson, of Wayne township; Mrs. Luella Kirby, of Knox county, and John H. Davidson. Edward R. Davidson and Mrs. Linnie Wilkinson, of Columbus.

He was a member of the Christian church and joined that organization under the pastorate of Rev. C. L. Winget.

The funeral services will be held from the Hill Funeral Home Sunday afternoon at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. R. L. Cross. Burial in Springlawn cemetery.

CLEMENCY IS ASKED

This is Edna Bond, the little mountain girl of West Virginia, in whose behalf President Coolidge will be appealed to. The President is the only person who can open the gates and allow Edna to walk out into the sunlight of freedom. She is now in the Stark county workhouse because a whisky still was found a half mile from her mountain cabin. She is serving the longest sentence ever known in the history of the world for bootlegging—seven years—and a fine of $6,000 which if she were forced to work it out at the rate of 60 cents a day would keep her in prison for 35 years.

And the Rest Followed

"I see," said Gabe Giggery, "that yore wife has got a new bunnit. Did you have anything to do with her getting it?" "Yes—dad-blast the luck!" returned Zeke Yawkey. "I told her she couldn't—by gosh—have it!"—Kansas City Star.

INFURIATED BULL KILLED ITS OWNER

Fred Van Sceiver Gored to Death at His Home Near Grove City.

Fred Van Sceiver, 39, farmer, was gored to death by a bull Friday on his farm, three miles west of Grove City.

Van Sceiver and Glenn Bricker, who lives on the farm, were building fence on the field where the bull was kept. While their backs were turned, the bull suddenly attacked them.

Both men were knocked down. Bricker scrambled to his feet but Van Sceiver was pinned to the fence by the animal.

Running to the farm house, Bricker got a shotgun. When he returned the bull was stamping and goring Van-Sceiver. Eight times Bricker discharged the gun, riddling the animal with buckshot in an attempt to drive him away from his victim.

The mad bull paid no attention to the shot and it was many minutes before he could be driven off.

He died in the farm house a few minutes later.

Van Sceiver was a widower and leaves only a sister, Mrs. Edgar Haughn, of Grove City.

STOLEN CARS RECOVERED.

The service car of the Circleville Tire and Repair company which was stolen last Wednesday night was recovered by W. H. Nelson, the owner, at McArthur today. A traveling salesman for the Spetnagle Hardware company of Chillicothe, located the car at McArthur where it had been abandoned and at once notified Mr. Nelson.

A Ford car abandoned on the Columbus pike north of this city was taken up by Sheriff Young and Deputy Howard Irwin this morning. The car had been stolen from E. J. McNulty of Columbus. The owner of the car came down today and drove it home.

DIED AT ATHENS HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Margaret Dodd, widow of John Dodd died suddenly at the State hospital at Athens, Friday.

The deceased was born in Franklin county and was the daughter of Abraham and Sarah House Tatman. The Remains were taken to Mt. Sterling for burial.

LUTHERANS STAGED GOOD DISCUSSION

McGuffyites Won Over Modernists—Audience Judged the Contest.

The second annual March meeting of Trinity Lutheran Brotherhood held in the social rooms of the church on Thursday evening, was one for the muses.

After the usual business procedure and the service of an excellent buffet lunch by George Himrod and his committee, the meeting was again called to order for contest between the McGuffeyites and the advocates of the modern day readers.

The exponents of McGuffey and the selections read were: J. D. Hummel, "Gray's Elegy in a Country Churchyard;" George C. Griffith, "Which" and C. O. Leist "Forty Years Ago;" C. M. Titus being absent his place was taken by one of the visitors, Editor J. W. Johnson, who ably read the "Psalm of Life."

The modernists were represented by R. L. Brehmer, who read "In Flander's Field;" J. R. Noecker "Somebody's Mother;" John C. Goeller "It Couldn't be Done" and Christian Schwarz, "Old Aunt Mary's."

The entire audience judged the contest and the ballot resulted just a little better than two to one in favor of the exponents of William H. McGuffey.

The music was in charge of E. C. Ebert with Carl F. Seitz at the piano.

The meeting ws a novel one and in the main was very successful. The first meeting in April will be entirely of a religious nature and will pertain to what the Lenten season means to the Lutheran and the Lutheran Church.

FIRST C. & O. DEED FILED

Judge Goldsberry Sells 7.31 Acres To Company For the Sum of $2,500.

The first deed of Ross county lands made to the C. & O. was filed today, County Recorder George Spencer reported Thursday.

The strip, the property of John W. Goldsberry containing 7.31 acres, was sold for the sum of $2,500. The deed was made to G. B. Wall as trustee for the railroad company.

The property is a part of the old Liebe farm bought by Judge Goldsberry and lies on the south side of the River road as it turns off from the Chillicothe-Kingston pike, across from the Mace McConnell farm.

This demonstrates that the building of the road up through this part of the county is only a matter of a comparatively short time.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

NEEDS LITTLE SLEEP

Scientists are mystified by the remarkable endurance of Alderson Fry, twenty, one of the most brilliant students at Marshall college, Princeton, W. Fry is alert and extremely active in college life, being a member of the swimming team, despite his disability, cheer leader, and manager of the college paper.

QUEEN ESTHER GIRLS ENJOY CEREMONIAL

Circleville Circle was Hostess to Neighboring City of Chillicothe.

From the time of the arrival of the Chillicothe Queen Esther Girls at Circleville where they were greeted by songs and yells of the entire Circleville Circle, the evening of March nineteenth was a red letter occasion as to numbers, enthusiasm and spiritual uplift.

The girls, wearing white bandeaus plentifully sprinkled with Shamrocks, escorted their guests to the church parlors where they were welcomed by Directress Mrs. E. A. Allen; the president of the W. H. M. society, Mrs. E. L. Tolbert, Directress Home Guards Miss Clara Woolever, and the wife of the minister Mrs. Edwin K. Johnson.

After the girls were escorted to the green-decorated pews, the program opened with the singing of "America, the Beautiful." Scripture lesson. Faye Puckett; prayer, Mrs. Allen. A beautiful piano solo was given by Miss Aubrey Wickenseimer, which was followed by the roll call to which thirty-three Circleville girls responded.

Greetings were given by President Esther Shasteen, Mrs. Tolbert, Miss Woolever and Mrs. Ritz. The greeting from the girls was in the nature of a solo and chorus written by Mrs. Allen. Miss Kathryn Sanders sang the solo part and accompanied the chorus with her violin.

After the offering was received the program was turned over to Mrs. Arthur Cherrington, wife of the superintendent of the Chillicothe district, who acted as Royal Regent and with eleven girls in white and purple, gave the Queen Esther ceremonial in a most impressive manner. The gracious young Queen Esther was impersonated by Miss Pauline Mac Roberts, niece of Mrs. Walter Dearth, of this city. Miss Mary Elizabeth Pinto, of Chillicothe, gave the study book in a very interesting manner.

Following the playlet a procession of girls which filled the altar took the solemn obligation which made them truly Queen Esthers. Twenty-eight Circleville girls were initiated by the Royal Guard with the candidates who came from Chillicothe to take the solemn pledge.

After the signing of the charter, the Circleville girls led their guests to the dining rooms which were decorated with green and white. Crepe paper, green candles in crystal holders, potted plants and ribbons made the tables most attractive. A two course luncheon consisting of sandwiches, salad, cocoa, ice cream, angels' food cake with green icing and green mints were served.

Sixty persons enjoyed the hospitality of the Circleville girls upon this red letter night.

GLORIA ANN WEAVER.

Harry Butler arrived here this morning from Bradentown, Florida, with the remains of his grandchild, Gloria Ann Weaver.

OIL AND GAS BACK PRESSURE TESTED

Experiments Conducted by Bureau of Mines.

Washington.—The result of a series of experiments conducted by the Department of the Interior engineers to ascertain the effect of back pressure on the production of oil and gas are outlined in a paper by T. E. Swigart and C. R. Bopp, and recently issued by the bureau of mines. The experimental work was designed especially to determine how far the gas production of an oil well can be curtailed while the sand still contains plenty of gas, which can thus be saved to do work during the later life of the well.

"Virtually all oil men agree that 'when the gas is gone' the average oil well, except one that produces under a 'water head,' is practically exhausted," say the engineers. "Experienced oil men agree that if gas could be conserved and the rock pressure in the oil sand thus sustained above the usual level, the flow of gas would decline more slowly. This, of course, would result in a greater total ultimate production of oil from each well.

"To hold back pressures on pumping wells will cut down the daily gas production as well as the total number of cubic feet of gas produced with each barrel of oil. The practical application of the back-pressure method is limited, however. The amount of back-pressure that can be held also depends on a number of variable factors difficult to weigh until actual experiments are made.

"The operator who wishes to hold some back-pressure on his oil wells and thus delay the exhaustion of natural gas from his property must consider the possible effect if his neighbor continues producing at lower pressures or at atmospheric pressure. It is believed that under ordinary circumstances an operator who holds back pressures of more than five or ten pounds on his line wells—if they are offset at the usual distance—will be liable to lose oil by its migrating to a neighbor's well that is producing at atmospheric pressure.

Production May Be Prolonged.

"An agreement between all operators in a field whereby everybody held some pressure would be most desirable. Under such an arrangement the rock pressure in fields that now practically exhaust their gas within a few years would be maintained at comparatively high levels for many years.

"In general high back pressures can be held on isolated wells, on the 'inside' wells of large tracts, or on all wells of isolated tracts without seriously reducing the present daily production, and without danger of the loss of oil by migration. Perhaps the most difficult case to handle is that of the operator who has a relatively small tract on which every well is a line well. Back pressures higher than enough to collect the casing-head gas cannot be recommended to such an operator unless his neighbors will put on pressure also. If an operator owns a lease of 80 acres or more on which he has inside locations he could probably afford to hold his inside wells under pressure and his line wells at the same pressure, or a little above the pressure on his neighbors' wells if they were producing at lower pressures.

"As long as wells are not closely offset by other wells producing at atmospheric pressure, fairly high back pressures should not so reduce the present daily oil production that an operator would not be justified in holding pressure, provided, of course, that back pressure increased the efficiency of production as well as the ultimate production of oil.

Back Pressure in the Field.

"As regards the application of back pressure in the field, the need for carefully regulating pressure and determining efficiency is paramount. Slipshod operating methods are almost certain to fail wholly or at least partly. Experience gained in the bureau of mines tests leads to the belief that a careful study of conditions, combined with frequent simple field tests, would enable an operator to obtain good results.

"Oil and water must be gauged accurately. The daily gauges of nearby wells and of the lease also should be watched.

"The casing-head gas production of wells or units of more than one well is quite as important as the oil production because upon both depends the efficiency of the method. The operator will have to choose the best method available for measuring gas production. Under ordinary circumstances the head-line gas production will not be large enough to warrant careful measurement, particularly if gas anchors are installed before the tests are started."

The back-pressure method of handling wells is not recommended by the bureau of mines for indiscriminate use. In many localities it will be practical. The bureau feels, however, that these tests indicate the possibilities of holding pressure and increasing the efficiency of production of oil. The bureau adds that the chances for increasing the ultimate oil production seem to warrant consideration of this or other improved methods that may be developed.

Copies of this paper may be obtained from the Department of the Interior, Washington.

Classic Ensemble Milady's Favorite

Winsome Outfit Proves to Be Most Satisfactory Model of Season.

Out of extremes moderation is achieved, says a fashion authority in the New York Times. So from the wildest extravagances and incongruities of Egyptian and other far distant origins have been evolved the refreshing youthful silhouettes, the slender lines and the classic ensemble. And in these the rarest fabrics, the most splendid metal and silk brocades appear in patterns inspired by great works of art, expressed in all the beautiful colors ever known. No woman could look unlovely in them.

In dress of this type are embodied classic ideals in lines, materials and harmonies of color. As a result of radical remodeling, the curveless one-piece frock, whether made of blue serge for morning street wear or of rainbow tinted silver tissue for evening, is a garment of dignity, beauty and importance. Its variants are countless. It is as enchanting in finely plaited white chiffon, snowy and soft, as when the same model is done in the most bizarre metal cloth splashed across with colors. When a simple, plain-colored fabric is used, the unbroken line of the chemise frock is made into a brilliant costume, with added motifs in brilliants, feathers, fur, metal lace and other most lovely luxuries.

After the straight frock began to be monotonous the feeling for something more interesting was evident in the softening of lines, the drawing of curves, the lifting of length to create drapery and the dropping of skirts to add grace. The evolved evening gown was built in a manner to match dignity of design with quality and type of material, and nothing more charming has ever been shown by the prominent style creators.

Generally Satisfactory.

"Ensemble" expresses one of the most satisfactory costumes of the season. The three-piece suit known heretofore was a clumsy affair which, being all cloth, appeared always to be too heavy or not heavy enough for late autumn street wear. When it reappeared this season it presented a gown of satin or crepe with a practical wrap of cloth and fur, the idea of ensemble being maintained by lining the coat with the stuff of the dress. It has gone so well that the model is redone in more elaborate form for evening and is designed in lighter materials for southern resort wear and early spring weather.

The fur trimming is almost universal. A frock of satin or crepe receives a richer appearance with bands of fur of even the narrowest measurement, and in some of the late models of straight silhouette a wide band of fur borders the skirt. This is used with profusion on the wrap that accompanies the frock, and one seldom sees now a coat that is without a lavish display of fur. The furs are in themselves a distinguished feature of the season.

Another type of dress that shows a marked evolution is the sport suit. There is not nowadays anything hit-or-miss or nondescript about the sport togs of persons of fashion. They have a style of their own, striking, picturesque, suitable and comfortable. The latest outfits, breeches, sweaters, kid jackets, boots and scarfs, are stunning—extremes done with masterful skill and artistry. The woven and knitted sweater-blouses, waistbands and scarfs, in the striped, plaid and zig-zag patterns, are gay, chic affairs and are the high lights in the most successful expression of costume in the entire wardrobe. The modern version of the homely old-time knit goods is present, and the attraction of the homespuns and English materials that are best adapted to this sort of costume.

Dinner and Dance Frocks.

The dinner gowns and dance frocks this season are among the most artistic costumes, and match in beauty and grace the models of earlier times. With daring and assurance the leading creators of Paris have presented the most important styles in models of elaborate simplicity and grace, done in splendid fabrics, beautiful colors and detail of much interest. Unheard of combinations have been successfully achieved with the use of rich brocades, velvets, fur, metals, laces and gauzy tissues. And the proof of their value is the appreciative response of cultivated taste, for women of today are discriminating.

With a sure touch the folk crafts of old countries are used to ornament the latest achievements of the loom, and peasant-woven woolen embroiders the sheerest spun silks. That these extremes are made to meet with results wholly artistic is a tribute to the talent and skill that are given to the subject of dress and the important place it has come to have in the estimate of artists of the highest standing.

One style of dress that has needed no argument for its presentation is the "period" costume. Nothing has ever expressed better the subtlety and charm of the swish of silken skirts, and more beauty is suggested by the skirt of many folds than is revealed by the clinging lines of scant drapery. Designed long ago, the quaint frock with plain, tight bodice, the neck outlined with a demure bertha, a waistline unexaggerated and wide and full skirts have come back to fascinate the belle of today and to give her a conscious air of something that bears the stamp of tradition.

Every girl loves to wear this dress reminiscent of the crinoline period. While it graces every one, only an occasional woman appears in it with ease and distinction. This season some of the most prominent modistes and the most exclusive shops in New York have featured the period dress, depending upon material and color for whatever variants they have offered, and its popularity continues undiminished.

The new crisp taffetas in plain colors and the "shot" silks are entrancing in these full-petticoated frocks, and a bertha of real lace is never seen to better advantage. One model which will have an enduring picture value is made of black chiffon velvet, the collar of old rose point pinned with an old brooch of seed pearls. Long medallion earrings match brooch and necklace, and a cluster of gardenias is fastened at one side of the belt. Nothing in the styles of the present day illustrates more happily and truly the elegance and beauty of the dress of earlier times.

Elimination of Barbarities.

In just what manner the styles of today will develop, which way they will be swayed by fashion and fancy, cannot be foreseen. But that they have now a place of increasing importance in the world of art and convention is quite plain. And whatever of folly, extravagance or lack of taste or propriety appears in the present modes, we have come a long way in the elimination of some barbarities that will not likely be seen again. For now that tight stays and collars, Louis Quinze heels for walking, and skirts that sweep the pavement are no longer fashionable, they are certainly obsolete and their extreme opposites that add so much to the joy and comfort of life will endure.

The style of wearing street gloves with the cuffs turned down over the hand has resulted in special designs in the finish of the lining which adds much to the appearance of the glove. Because of this fad the cuff lining is strikingly emphasized and has become more important than the ornamentation of the outside covering. In some instances it is literally a "silver lining" of silvered kid or cloth of silver or stitching done with silver tinsel thread.

A modish glove has a cutout pattern of the kid showing a contrasting color underneath, which is particularly smart when done in black and white. Those in tan and white, brown and white and gray and white are also attractive. The patterns in needlework on the cuff lining are countless and some are exceedingly pretty.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

BASKETBALL GAME FIGHT AT JACKSON

C. A. C. Defeated Jackson Bankers by Score of 40 to 36.

Reovering from a bad start the C. A. C. basket shooters defeated the Jackson Bankers in an overtime period 40 to 36.

It took the club boys ten minutes to accustom themselves to the surroundings and the first quarter ended with Jackson leading 12 to 4 but right here the boys started off and at the half had reduced the Jackson lead to three points.

The second half started with a bang and the score see-sawed thruout and stood 34 all when the final whistle blew. In the overtime period the C. A. C. boys caged three buckets while Jackson was securing one.

All the boys played a sensational game after they got to going and the Jackson fans appreciated their playing ability and realized the home team had a job on their hands and found it was one they could not finish.

The Jackson Bankers have a strong team and local fans are assured a real game when they play on the local floor March 26.

The Prompt Response

Of all the stories relating to our colored troopers in their services overseas, I think the one I like best has to do with a brawny black infantryman, who, on his way up to the front for his first taste of actual combat, fortified himself on a full quart of potent French wine.

As a result, he reached the forward position in a somewhat elevated and slightly groggy state. He had been warned in advance that he was going into an exceedingly busy and dangerous sector, but it so happened at the moment of his arrival the immediate vicinity was strangely quiet. He glanced about him in a foggy but disappointed way, and then, addressing his fellow occupants of the trench generally, spoke as follows:

"Wha's de war?—tha's what I wants to know! White folks suttinly is mouty deceivin'. Yere dey promises me a war. So dey rides me 'crost mo'n a million miles of ocean an' dey marches me th'ough mo'n a thousand miles of mud, an' all de w'ile dey keeps on tellin' me 'at w'en I gits up yere dey'll be a war waitin' fur me. An' yere I is an' dey ain't no war! Dat ain't no way to act. Ef any of you folks is got ary war jest fetch it on 'an' leave it to me. Dat's all—jest leave it in my hands!"

A veteran of several months' experience in the trenches informed him that his desires should shortly be gratified, inasmuch as the hostile positions were only about two hundred yards away, and the enemy was both active and alert.

Hearing this, the green hand leaped upon the parapet and, standing there revealed in the moonlight, like a great black statue of defiance, he shook a broad fist in the direction of the foes' lines, and in a voice which might have been heard half a mile away he cried out:

"Come on, you Heinie Germans, an' gimme war! Gimme all de war you's got! Gimme exploserives! Gimme gas shells! Gimme scrapernel! Gimme bung shells! Most in 'special I asts you fur bung shells!"

At this particular moment a German minnenwerfer, two feet long and nine inches in diameter and filled with potential ill health, went whirring in its wabbly, uncertain flight just over his head, and with a crash like the crack of doom struck not fifty yards behind him, tearing a hole in the earth big enough for the foundations of a smoke house. The belligerent warrior was slapped flat and instantly covered in a half-inch coating of powdered grit and gravel and dust.

There he lay, stunned, until the last reverberation had died away and the tortured earth had ceased from its quiverings. Then, slowly and cautiously, he sat up. First he felt himself all over to make sure he was intact; then he stole a respectful glance rearward to where the huge, newformed crater behind him still was smoking and fuming and throwing off noxious smells, and then he cast a cautious look in the direction from which the devlish visitor had come, and, finally, in a still, small, curiously altered voice, he said:

"Well, suzz, dey's one thing you's got to say fur dem Germans—dey suttinly does give you service!"

Your Grandfather Laughed at This One

I do not pretend that these stories are all new, but merely that they are the stories which the writer likes best of those he has heard. Indeed, some of them are old—very, very old. The one which follows has the merit of antiquity. I am including it in the present series because I think it is an almighty good one.

On a south Georgia plantation a group of darkies went coon-hunting one night. Because of his love for the ancient and honorable sport they took with them Uncle Sam, the patriarch of the colored quarters. Uncle Sam was over eighty years old and all kinked up with rheumatism. He hobbled along behind the hunters as they filed off through the woods.

The dogs "treed" in a sweet gum snag on the edge of Pipemaker swamp, five miles from home; but when the tree fell there rolled out of the top of it, not a raccoon but a full-grown black bear, full of fight and temper.

The pack gave one choral ki-yi of shock and streaked away, yelping as they went; and the two-legged hunters followed, fleeing as fast as their legs would carry them.

When they came to a moonlit place in the woods they discovered that Uncle Sam was missing; but they did not go back to look for him—they did not even check up.

"Pore ole Unc' Sam!" bemoaned one of the fugitives, between pants. "His ole laigs must 'a' give out on him 'foh he went ten jumps. I reckin dat bear's feastin' on his bones right dis minute."

"Dat's so! Dat's so!" grunted one of the others. "Pore Unc' Sam!"

When they reached the safety of the cotton patches in an exhausted state they limped to Uncle Sam's cottage to break the news to the widow. There was a light in the window; and when they rapped at the door, and it opened, the sight of him who faced them across the threshold made them gasp.

"Foh de Lawd!" exclaimed one. "How you git heah?"

"Me?" said Uncle Sam calmly, "I come 'long wid de dawgs."

DON SWEPSTON HAS ACCIDENT

Former County Sheriff Narrowly Escaped Death In Waverly Pike Mishap.

An automobile driven by Donald Swepston, former sheriff of Ross county, was demolished late Wednesday evening when it skidded and overturned on the Waverly pike, two miles north of Waverly. Swepston escaped with a number of cuts and bruises but was not seriously injured. James Hangs and Charles Bolmer, companions, were slightly bruised.

The accident occurred at the end of the cement road and it is believed the soft dirt caused the machine to topple over. Turning over three times the machine stopped in a deep ditch and the occupants experienced a narrow escape from death. The Chillicothe Auto Service towed the car to this city.

Wednesday evening's accident was second narrow escape this year for Swepston, he having been slightly injured when his auto was wrecked on the Washington C. H. pike about a month ago. Swepston was alone at the time of the first crash in which he received cuts and bruises about the body.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

CAMP SHERMAN IS SELECTED

Chillicothe, March 19.—Camp Sherman has been selected by the war department as a mobilization center, to rank along with Fort Benjamin Harrison and Camp Knox in the Fifth Corps Area, according to a bulletin received from headquarters by a local reserve officer.

It is understood that the camp is to be equipped as a mobilization center for this district and to be used as a point for the training of reserve officers. The bulletin, however, stated that the officers in this district wishing to take the fifteen days' training course before June 30, 1926, should make application to the headquarters of the Fifth Corps Area, which will assign them to one of the present camps.

This seems to indicate that Camp Sherman will not be equipped as a mobilization center until after June, 1926. It is believed that once it is established, Camp Sherman will become a permanent center for the mobilzation of the local units of National Guard, Regular Army and Organized Reserves and instead of recruits being sent in large numbers to a camp and units organized there as was done in the World War, they will go direct to units stationed in or near the locality in which they live.

Finds Skull of "Missing Link" in South Africa

Cape Town, South Africa.—What is believed to be the "missing link" has been discovered in South Africa. It is a skull of a creature which was neither anthropoid ape nor human being, but an intermediate between both forms of brain power. The discovery was made by Raymond Dart, professor of anatomy in Watersrand university, last November in a lime cliff nine miles southwest of Gaungs, Bechuanaland. It was buried at a depth of 50 feet. The find included fossilized bone and a cast of the brain and bones, impressed in the limestone.

Professor Dart, who has been investigating his discovery at Johannesburg, said the skull was that of a creature which was not a human being, yet was much more intelligent than the gorilla or chimpanzee, which are the highest type of living apes. This creature was unable to talk, but had brains sufficiently advanced in the direction required by one whose offspring would ultimately attain the power of speech. The new discovery was made nearly 1,000 miles south of where the oldest skull of creation was previously found.

AMUSEMENTS

Gloria Swanson's latest picture, "Her Love Story" boasts a truly extraordinary cast and it is due to the fact that Allan Dwan, who directed it for the Paramount oranizatioi takes the word "realism" seriously. "Her Love Story" is based upon Frank Tuttle's adaptation of "Her Majesty the Queen" by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It is a touching romance of love and mother love in the atmosphere of royalty.

Gloria plays the part of the queen. The other members of the all star cast include such capable players as Ian Keith, George Fawcett, Mario Majeroni and Donald Hall. Now here's where Allan Dawn's mania for realism comes in. He wasn't satisfied to have merely actors, no matter how able, interpret the various roles. He wanted the genuine, dyed-in-the-wool nobility—men and women who were just as much at home in a European court as the average man is on Main street. And he got them! So that when you see the Baroness de Hedemann or General Lodijensky on the screen, remember you are looking at people who spent most of their life hobnobbing with real kings and queens.

Gloria shows us in the story that the life of a queen is not all that it's cracked up to be. Not that being a queen hasn't got its advantages, because it certainly has! On the other hand there are so many disadvantages that the average girl who sees the picture will be glad that she wasn't born to the royal purple! The photoplay will be on view for two days at te Met theater beginning next Monday.

Sam H. Harris will present Irving Berlin's third annual Music Box Revue at the Hartman theater, Columbus, Monday night, March 23, for a week's engagement with Wednesday and Saturday matinees. The Music Box Revue has proved its worth these three years and is an established institution and a marked favorite with theater goers. All last year the new revue was presented to crowded houses at the Music Box theater in New York and, of course, the elaborate production with its intricate under stage and overstage effects and its exquisitely beautiful scenery and costumes, will be shown here just as it was in New York. Beautiful as it is to the eye, it is also true that in the way of fun music and girls nothing in theatrical presentation compares with the Music Box Revue. In New York the third annual revue with the music and lyrics by Irving Berlin and staged by Hassard Short was considered far and away the best of the three, and the cast the finest ever assembled in a revue. Here are some of the principals in the company of one hundred: Florence Moore, John Steel, Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer, Johnny Burke, Solly Ward Florence O'Dennishawn, Hugh Cameron, Phil Baker, Ruth Thomas, Nelson Snow, Charles Columbus Dorothy Dilley and three Wainwright sisters, Bpena, Vista, Eric Titus and Helen Rich. There will be a special augmented orchestra for the local engagement of the Music Box Revue. Mail orders now.

CHARGES NEGLECT OF CHILDREN'S SIGHT

Eye Sight Board Finds Conditions Deplorable.

New York.—Fully 37 per cent or approximately 12,000 school children undergoing vision tests conducted by the United States public health service were found to have defective eyes with less than standard vision, according to a statement by the Eye Sight Conservation Council of America, which, analyzing the results, calls such conditions deplorable as constituting neglect of eyesight in the nation's schools.

One-tenth of the children examined under the direction of Dr. Taliaferro Clark, in charge of field investigation in child hygiene, had one-half standard vision or less in one or both eyes. Only 10 per cent of those badly in need of glasses, it was pointed out, were provided with them.

The tests, part of a general physical examination made by officers of the public health service, according to a report of the service, compiled by Selwyn D. Collins, associate statistician, embraced 9,245 native white children from six to sixteen years of age in four Eastern areas; Spartanburg, South Carolina, and nearby villages, Frederick county, Maryland; New Castle county, Delaware, and Nassau county, New York. In addition, 2,535 white children underwent examination in Cecil county, Maryland.

Use Simple Tests.

The results of the visual acuity tests, made with standard test type include, it is stated, only the manifest defects. These simple tests showed that 63 per cent of the children were normal in both eyes; 27 per cent were moderately defective, and 10 per cent had only five-tenths standard vision or less in one or both eyes.

"When separated according to age," says the statement of the Eye Sight Conservation Council, interpreting the conditions revealed by the public health service, "it was found that the number of children with marked defects of vision at sixteen years of age was an increase of over four times the number at six years of age with marked defects. There seems to be but slight relationship between defective vision and sex, although there were more girls than boys with moderately defective vision. Also there were just about as many defective right eyes as there were defective left eyes.

"It was shown that generally the vision was approximately the same in both eyes but in many cases good vision in one eye was found combined with very poor in the other."

Urges Examinations.

The council, which is directing nationwide effort for better vision in education and industry, calls the report prepared by Mr. Collins, "striking evidence of the limited extent to which the eyesight of school children is being given attention," adding:

"There is such a large proportion of school children with defective vision that every possible effort should be made to discover those who are needlessly handicapped and to bring the matter so forcibly to the attention of parents that all those in need of correction will be fitted with proper glasses."

The report emphasizes as most striking that but a small proportion of children with very poor vision were wearing glasses to improve their sight. Among the older children fourteen to sixteen years of age only 23 per cent of those needing glasses had glasses. Only 10.9 per cent of the 925 children with vision five-tenths or less were wearing glasses.

A larger proportion of girls were wearing glasses than boys.

Washington Assembles Rare Gifts to Nation

Washington.—The State department has rescued from its temporary wartime quarters in a sub-basement a collection of rare gifts from the East, presented to the American government as good-will offerings.

Swords from Japan and Siam, a stone from the great wall of China, relics from Korea and rare embroideries are in the collection.

Miscellaneous documentary material and objects of art now in the keeping of the State department would, in the opinion of officials, be valued in the millions of dollars if offered for sale.

The swords from Japan seem to have been brought here by the first mission from Japan in 1860, when ratifications of the treaty of 1858 were exchanged. These gifts corresponded, it is believed, with those that Commodore Perry took with him to Japan.

When the treaty with Korea was ratified here, the members of the mission from that country brought presents with them. The Japanese mission of 1872 likewise brought gifts.

Congress may be asked to make provision by appropriation for the proper care of these articles.

Selects Funeral Parlor in Which to End Life

Newark, N. J.—Frederick Hellrigel, sixty-five years old, who had acquired a habit of daily walking into the funeral parlor of C. W. Heilmann on West street, where he sat and read a morning German language newspaper, after taking his usual seat and saying "good morning" to Heilmann, drew a revolver and instantly killed himself with a bullet through the head. Despondency over a physical and financial condition which recently kept him in an almshouse for a period, is believed to have caused his act.

HORTENSE'S OWN CHOICE

By MOLLIE MATHER

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

HORTENSE had long provoked her sisters, even while they loved her. Years ago—a good many—she had returned from the fashionable boarding school, which general family sacrifice had made it possible for her to attend—a "finished" young lady.

Hortense had grown too fastidious to endure her relatives. Father sent her to college, and when father was no longer here to humor his favorite child, the sisters, one by one, had Hortense at their homes. That Hortense had not shown preference for any of her many admirers was their perplexity. When she had lived with sister Alice for part of one summer Alice confided to her family the difficulty with Hortense.

"She has an idea," said Alice, "that no man is good enough for her. I am afraid that when Hortense does decide to marry, it will be the proverbial 'crooked stick' of the overparticular."

It was about this time that Homer Wainwright appeared. He did not come as her brother-in-law's guest. Mr. Wainwright, elegant of mien and fascinating as to manner, came quite accidentally, mistaking the number of the house for one he should have called at across the street. So pleasing was he in his apologies that Hortense, later calling upon her friend, Mrs. Laidlaw, across the street, mentioned interestedly Mrs. Laidlaw's friend, who had made the mistake in street numbers.

"Oh, Homer Wainwright is a most lovable man," remarked Mrs. Laidlaw; "a sort of cousin of my husband. His business? I really do not think Homer has any business in particular; just lives," she laughed, "upon the interest of his money. He still occupies the old family home in Weston square, relegated now into the downtown section, but long ago a home of much pretension. Wish he might marry some helpful young woman. Homer has always been difficult to suit, or rather to impress."

Following this conversation Mrs. Laidlaw invited simultaneously her distant cousin and her neighbor from across the street to dinner. So the acquaintance between Hortense and the man of her approval began. Very soon the acquaintance ripened into friendship, then into love.

Fred, the brother-in-law, alone appeared not to share the family rejoicing.

"I'd like to know more about that paragon idler than that he lives in an old house on the old square," he remarked dryly.

But Hortense amusedly returned that Fred "never could understand atmosphere," and that the quaint, stately residence was in harmony with Homer's esthetic personality.

So Hortense at length married. Her sisters fancied, when they visited her in the old house, that she looked paler and grew slimmer. But she assured them that she was happy, and Homer's devoted attitude left nothing, evidently, to be desired in affection.

The sisters moved into a still farther suburb. They were concerned about Homer's source of income, or apparent lack of it, for the shabbiness of the proud Hortense was noticeable. Coldly she resented their questioning, and injured feelings upon both sides held the sisters aloof.

"You remember," Alice remarked to the family, "what I prophesied about the 'poor stick'? For Homer is certainly a 'poor stick,' if not a crooked one." Then, surprisingly, through a remark of Mrs. Laidlaw's, came news of the prosperity of Hortense. "The Wainwrights are building the prettiest bungalow out in Roselawn," she announced.

Curiosity, overmastering offended feeling, Alice went to call at the big house on the square. A strange woman opened the door, lights shone from many windows. "Mr. and Mrs. Wainwright have moved into their new home," the woman informed Alice. She hastened on in the direction of the bungalow. Homer met her hospitably at the wide white door. Hortense, in a modish frock, added her greeting in the inviting living room.

"Yes," she graciously answered her sister's veiled question, "Homer is doing very well financially; for quite a time his income was tied up, so to speak—such things happen. But Homer is so clever, and you know my insistent luxurious nature, Alice. Well, there is much in finding the exact man of one's choice."

Alice was humble as she went her way. She intended to tell Fred that he had wrongly judged his charming brother-in-law.

When Alice was gone Homer leaned back in his comfortable fireside chair with an adoring glance at his wife.

"You are sure you have found a satisfactory manager of our rooming house, Hortie? Of course no one may continue it with your homelike skill, which made the downtown place so popular. As a small, select hotel it should thrive. My dear, I really do not know what we should have done in our almost penniless condition—for your small legacy was quite inadequate to our needs—if you had not conceived turning the many rooms in my old home into money. Your untiring labor is repaid. You see, I give full appreciation, my dear."

"I hope," said Hortense, nestling to the side of the lovable Homer, "that my family will not realize the main source of our income. I would rather, as the hotel is later discovered, to have it appear as one of your successful ventures."

Immortal Flippancy

Naval officers tell about a midshipman who was bright but inclined to be flippant. In an important examination, he wrote this answer to a question: "The action resulting under the circumstances was due to the inherent cussedness of inanimate objects." The answer and the remarks of the instructor have become famous.

THE HUNTER AND HUNTED

By H. IRVING KING

(©, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

HORTENSE CATHERWOOD was a man hunter of the most savage and remorseless kind. No red Indian ever tracked his enemy through the pathless forest with more skill and persistency than Hortense pursued her prey through the tangled wilderness of society.

Hortense looked upon Edgar Arnold—and it was all over with her. No more moonlight hunts beneath the dimmed electric lights of the conservatory; no more bold dashes on the open ballroom floor to the clanging horns of the orchestra.

Edgar was not remarkable in any way, though Hortense thought he was. He was passably good looking, was possessed of a modest fortune and had a business which had been established by his grandfather and went along through sheer force of momentum. He knew Hortense—and her reputation—and was afraid of her. He was a rather shy young man anyway. And Hortense had suddenly become shy, too. She began to sit out dances by the side of her mother, or her aunt; refused all sorts of invitations to gay house parties and yachting excursions.

Now Edgar, with all his shyness, had a secret ambition to be considered a lady-killer. He gazed upon Hortense and told himself that she did not look so formidable after all. He ventured upon some commonplaces when he was with her one night and was surprised to see her actually blush, when he took a seat beside her. "Pho! Who's afraid!" he asked himself. The men who had been brought down by this star-eyed Artemis did not understand women—that was all.

A delightful vision arose before him. If he could tame this wild huntress who had been going about with the scalps of her victims dangling from her girdle his longed-for reputation as a lady-killer would be gloriously established. You see Edgar did not really know the game. Hortense knew it perfectly—but she could not play it, being in love, any more than a great artist, suddenly gone color-blind, can paint a picture.

The designing youth entered into his new diversion with enthusiasm and found he really enjoyed it. As for Hortense if she ever suspected she put the horrid thought away. She was too far gone in love to be really sensible. Considering the ruthlessness of her past and the imbecility of her present conduct, Hortense was, strictly speaking, not entitled to any sympathy. Yet, it was rather a hard blow to her, you must acknowledge, when she heard that Edgar had become engaged to the wealthy Ileen Gravesend. When she first heard the rumor she scouted it, but so many people told it to her as a well-known fact that she believed it. What should she do? She thought of settlement work, a convent, Mah Jong and public speaking. But none of them filled the bill.

You may ask why she had not approached Edgar upon the subject of his engagement when she first heard of it. Evidently you have never been in love. She would not insult her beloved youth by suggesting to him the possibility of his becoming engaged to any one except herself. That was one reason—the one she told herself. But there was another and a deeper one—she had a horrible fear of putting a question, the answer to which might wreck her hopes of happiness forever. She temporized—put off, as we all do, the confronting of a situation which, we secretly fear, will be disasterous to us. But now she felt that the crisis was approaching—had, in fact, arrived. The night of the day upon which she came to this decision Edgar came to see her in a very serious state of mind—if his looks were any criterion. This was a bad sign.

Hortense had been crying and her eyes were red. She did not look as pretty as usual. Both were ill at ease and showed they each had something to say and did not know just how to begin saying it. The fact was that Edgar had made a discovery—made it all of a sudden, too. While he had fancied that he was simply playing with Hortense it had come upon him all at once that he was in love with her. Then the ghastly thought presented itself. Am I another victim to this man-hunter? Has she been playing with me all this time—only changing her method from those of the adventurous huntress to that of the patient trapper of the game?

"It should serve me right if she has," he thought. And now he had come to find out—and did not dare to find out. There is no knowing if either of them would have found courage to come up to the scratch had not Mrs. Catherwood come into the room and greeted Edgar in her hearty manner with: "Good evening, Edgar. What are you doing here? Why aren't you paying court to Ileen?"

"What Ileen?" asked Edgar.

"Why, Ileen Gravesend. You are going to marry her, are you not? Everybody says so."

"No, I am not going to marry her," replied Edgar. "I wonder who started that silly story?"

"Indeed! Then whom are you going to marry? It's time you married somebody—you are nearly thirty."

"I am going to marry your daughter—if she'll have me," replied Edgar, desperately.

Edgar and Hortense were married in June. There is no particular moral to this story, but there is a problem. As between Edgar and Hortense, who was the hunter and who the hunted?

Famous Comstock Lode

The Comstock lode, in Nevada, is a fissure vein four miles long, filling a faultplane in the andesire-dierite rocks of Mount Davison near Virginia City. The ore is quartz carrying silver and gold and occurs as shoots up to 360 feet long and 90 feet wide. The lode has been developed to a depth of 2,900 feet.

Plants Lose Fragrance

Fragrance is not traceable to heredity, and plant breeders know nothing of the laws that govern its presence or its absence. Plants sometimes lose their fragrance. This has happened in England to the old garden musk, once grown for its fragrance, but now lacking it.

"What is her home like?"

It's a question women ask of each other at the club, at the theater, at the luncheon.

"Oh, so---so," with the faintest shrug of the shoulders.

Or perhaps, "Why, nice enough,"---with just a little hesitation, "er---nothing unusual, though."

But, sometimes, the reply is:

"Simply beatiful. Not elaborate, but such good taste."

Keep Flock Healthy Through Sanitation

Plan to Secure Eggs While Prices Are High.

It is most important that the birds be kept in health during the winter months, not simply because we are anxious to secure a good production while prices are high but also because the condition of the birds now is going to materially affect the results of the breeding season next spring and the mortality for the whole coming year.

You have probably noticed how quickly the birds quit scratching when the litter becomes heavy or dirty and begin to spend much time sitting about. This reduces their circulation, makes them more subject to colds and also slows up digestion and appetite.

Dust has been shown to irritate the birds' lungs and makes them more subject to colds. Just how to keep this dust down on dirt floors is a problem. Oiling has been tried, but the oil is usually tracked onto the eggs, affecting their flavor and hatchability. Several inches of clean sand on the packed dirt with straw above this seems to be the best solution. Ashes or cinders should not be put in the house. The former makes an exceedingly fine and caustic dust, the latter are sharp and often result in injury to the feet. The writer has not seen a patented litter which proved entirely satisfactory.

Most hen houses need a much more frequent disinfecting than they usually get to destroy accumulations of bacteria causing roup and other contagious diseases. A fine spray is superior to painting because it is dark cracks which need the application most. The floor and nests should be thoroughly sprayed each time the litter is removed. Sheep dips diluted a pint to twelve quarts of water are satisfactory.—O. C. Krum, Poultry Specialist, Colorado Agricultur. College.

Ohio Potatoes Produce Higher Yields in 1924

Ohio certified seed potatoes produce higher yields (at least in Ohio) than do the certified tubers from sister potato-growing states, says N. W. Glines, farm crops specialist at Ohio State university. He bases his assertion on results obtained at the Ohio experiment station at Wooster. Tests there showed average yields of 204 bushels an acre for Ohio Russet Rurals, 218 bushels for Ohio White Rurals, 147 bushels for Wisconsin White Rurals, 179 bushels for Michigan Russet Rurals and 122 bushels for New York White Rurals, the latter, however, only on the basis of one sample.

The Ohio samples were obtained by securing a peck from each grower whose seed was certified in 1923, this being one of the requirements for certification.

Mr. Glines reports an increasing interest throughout the state in certified seed. In 1924 there were 8,700 bushels of Ohio White Rurals and 2,530 bushels of Ohio Russet Rurals certified for seed.

Better Live Stock and Improved Feed Methods

In recent years various methods have been developed for encouraging the adoption of better live stock and improved methods of handling and feeding them. Five years ago the department started the better sires, better stock campaign and now there are more than 15,000 farmers throughout the country who have pledged themselves to use nothing but pure bred sires of any kind on their farms. Other factors in present-day live stock improvement are boys' and girls' clubs, demonstrations, exhibits, ton-litter clubs, thousand-pound calf clubs, country-sire-sales plan, cow-testing associations, stallion registry, co-operative bull associations, ram rings, poultry improvement activities and various other means. The United States Department of Agriculture is active in encouraging all of these various means of improvement.

Sweet clover improves the soil much more rapidly than red clover, because it has a greater root system which penetrates the subsoil deeper than red clover. The long roots loosen up the subsoil and at the same time put humus in it.

Few Aggressive Snakes

The Department of Agriculture says that the king cobra of Asia has been known to follow and attack persons, and the large constricting snakes of the tropics also at times are aggressive. The poisonous snakes of the United States usually do not attack men unless molested.

Cost of Stamp Production

To supply the nation with its yearly output of postage stamps, more than 50 acres of spruce trees are needed. Ink, paper and gum, besides, are required, so that one million dollars' worth of supplies goes through the stamp machines every day.

POLISH CORRIDOR TO DANZIG IS HARD

Few Travelers Know About Passport Regulations.

Marienburg, East Prussia.—The Polish corridor has probably been the promoter of more profanity than any other creation of the Versailles treaty. It separates East Prussia entirely from the rest of Germany, being a narrow strip of territory which connects Poland with the Baltic sea.

Therefore all railway travel to Russia and the new Baltic states, as well as East Prussia, must pass over this corridor, and nobody can enter Danzig from the west by land without touching Polish soil.

While Polish visas are required for all persons who wish to enter Danzig by rail from the west, few travelers going from Berlin or other cities in the west know of this regulation.

Danzig is a free city. No Danzig visa is necessary to enter that city. Consequently tourists assume that a trip from Hamburg or Berlin to Danzig does not involve any border difficulties.

Then Comes Disillusionment.

But there is great disillusionment when they reach the Polish corridor. All passengers destined for Danzig who have no Polish visa are locked into cars which are sealed while the trains stop in Danzig and are not unlocked until the train reaches German soil again in this city.

Consequently, Marienburg has become a popular refuge for travelers who have no Polish chop on their passports. This city has become the chief station on an underground railway leading into Danzig, and on an average 60 motor cars daily leave Marienburg for Danzig, taking a highway which does not touch Polish territory between Marienburg and Danzig.

This traffic in amazed passengers who are scarcely able to understand what the mystery is all about is in no sense illegal. It is merely a clever subterfuge which enables persons desirous of entering Danzig to dodge the irregular-shaped corridor created by the Versailles conference in such a manner as to enable Poland to control important railway junctions.

Avoid Controls by Side Roads.

A motor car or carriage taking the highway south from Danzig to Marienburg, a distance of less than 30 miles, must pass through six different control stations. By taking side roads farther to the east than the main road, and crossing the Vistula river on a primitive ferry, it is possible to avoid all these controls and enter the free city of Danzig without question.

Marienburg hotels are always crowded with persons who are trying to get into Danzig. Every train from the west side of the corridor brings many surprised passengers who thought they were on their way to Danzig, but were not allowed to stop in the city. Day and night motor cars are running to Danzig.

The Polish corridor control can be avoided by boat, and in summer the Germans who come from west Prussia to Zopport, the celebrated seashore resort near Danzig, generally travel by sea. Many visitors also go to Danzig by air, thus dodging the corridor.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

1927 CONVENTION MAY GO TO PARIS

Authorization by the national executive committee to National Commander James A. Drain of the American Legion to appoint a France convention travel committee has given impetus to a movement to hold the 1927 convention of the Legion in Paris.

Commander Drain had suggested that the year 1927 would be very suitable to hold the convention in France. That year marks the tenth anniversary of America's entry into the World war and also of the landing on French soil of the first units of the A. E. F. It had previously been suggested that the 1928 convention be held in Paris. Final decision rests with the national convention.

The national executive committee at the same time selected October 5 to 9 as the dates for the seventh annual national convention of the Legion, which will be held in Omaha, Neb. Selection of the dates had been left to the executive committee by the St. Paul convention.

Preliminary plans for the Omaha convention are far advanced, according to Samuel Reynolds, chairman of the national convention work committee, who reported to the executive committee. He said that among the features of the convention will be a gigantic electrical parade staged by Ak-Sar-Ben, a Nebraska organization. Contests already decided on are: Band, drum and bugle corps and men's glee club contests, trap and pistol shoots and competition between drill teams of the auxiliary.

National standing committees of the Legion have been nominated by Commander Drain and confirmed by the national executive committee. Chairmen of the committees are:

Rehabilitation, Watson B. Miller, Washington; child welfare, Mark T. McKee, Detroit, Mich.; Americanism commission, E. K. Bixby, Muskogee, Okla.; foreign committee on Americanism, Harry W. Berdie, Tampico, Mex.; legislative, O. L. Bodenhamer, El Dorado, Ark.; finance, Wilder S. Metcalf, Lawrence, Kan.; naval affairs, E. E. Spafford, New York city; military affairs, George E. Leach, Minneapolis, Minn.; aeronautics, Reed Landis, Chicago; foreign relations commission, H. Nelson Jackson, Burlington, Vt.; distinguished guests, Alton T. Roberts, Marquette, Mich.; trustees Overseas Graves Decoration trust, Milton J. Foreman, Chicago; oriental, Thomas Swale, Seattle, Wash.; world peace, Thomas Amory Lee, Topeka, Kan.; trophies and awards, Asa Candler, Atlanta, Ga.; revocation of post charters, J. Robert Reichardt, Fort Smith, Ark.; national convention work, Samuel Reynolds, Omaha, Neb.; source records, A. Eugene Pattison, New Jersey.

THE LEGION

AUTHOR WOOLLEY, nationally known speaker, is extolling the American Legion in a series of addresses throughout the country. Speaking at Ogden, Utah, recently he said:

"The American Legion is one of the greatest organizations in the country and the most select fraternity in the world. The President of the United States in his message to congress recommends that congress be guided by the American Legion in all matters concerning the ex-service men. . . . Every piece of legislation beneficial to the ex-service men was sponsored and pushed by the Legion. . . . In the minds of those who formed the American Legion were the ties of friendship, the spirit of service in the hour of need, the love of country and a feeling of patriotism. . . . The Legion will keep alive the memories of the great war and thus remove the inevitableness of war. . . . By not forgetting the horrors of the last war, we can avoid future wars."

Forests Advocated as Memorials to Heroes

National "memory forests" as the most enduring and practical memorials the nation can dedicate to its dead of the World war were advocated by P. O. Anderson, state agriculturist, in an address.

Mr. Anderson, a World war veteran and a member of the American Legion, declared:

"We of the American Legion were able to get first-hand information regarding what provision the older countries have made regarding their timber supply. Europe has commercial forests. A timber shortage is inevitable in this country unless reforestation is done widely—why not memory forests which will perpetuate the memory of our boys enduringly . . ."

The American Legion, both in national and state conventions, has pledged itself to a program of conservation and reforestation.
